

United States Naval Planes Are Off on Greatest Mass Flight in Nation's History

NRA REVISION BEING PLANNED BY OFFICIALS

Powers Of Some Code Authorities Due For Slashing

By Joseph L. Miller
Associated Press Staff Writer
Washington, May 9.—(AP)—Plans for drastic revision of NRA to conform with expected congressional clipping of the Blue Eagle's wings today were disclosed by Donald R. Richberg.

Only those industries indisputably directly affecting interstate commerce would be coded in the new program. Complaints against troublesome fair trade practices in mainly codes would be referred to the federal trade commission.

Powers of some code authorities were due for a slashing. Enforcement methods were listed for change.

While Richberg gave newsmen this preview of the new code recovery agency, Senator Robinson, the democratic leader, decided to ask senate democrats at a party conference to-morrow whether they wanted NRA extended two years or just nine months.

A finance committee resolution house ways and means committee called for a nine-month extension, but democrats were in virtual agreement with the administration to insist upon a two-year old bill. The finance committee plan also would exempt all intra-state businesses from code regulation and outlast price-fixing.

Richberg said the recovery board heads was shaping up code revision plans for swift rebuilding when the new legislation was enacted. But the senate NRA measure was blocked behind a filibuster on the Norris Tennessee Valley bill, and Richberg foresaw the possibility of delay in enactment until early next month.

The recovery chief said public hearings likely would be necessary for revision of the major codes, that preliminary work now underway would speed in completing the new code.

Regarding code administration, he said that anything smacking of compulsion should be left to the government—that "no private individual should have the authority of a public official."

Johnson Brothers

The men were admitted to bail of $10,000 each. They were convicted in Cook county court and each sentenced to one to two years in prison and fined $3,000.

The Johnsons, officers of the Consumers Gas and Oil company of Chicago, were charged with transporting into Cook county 6,600,000 gallons of gasoline and withholding out approximately $200,000 in taxes due the state.

Honolulu, May 9.—(AP)—The American navy's secret move across a trackless stretch of mid-Pacific with an unprecedented 46-plane mass flight from Honolulu to Midway Island got under way here today and almost immediately faced the prospect of battling storm conditions at sea.

Soon after the planes had taken off here in a spectacular formation maneuver, J. F. Voorhees, government meteorologist, said heavy rain was falling and a 20-mile wind blowing at Midway Island, 1,323 miles distant.

It took one minute less than two hours for the heavily loaded aircraft, bearing some 200 officers and men, to get into the air one by one. Then like ships of the fleet the powerful planes lined up in squadrons and streaked away on a hitherto unblazed trail.

Somewhere in the great triangle between the American mainland, Alaska and Hawaii, the United States fleet guided the history making air armada with an unseen hand. The planes were on "routine duty" and their Pacific fleet operations.

Extreme secrecy surrounded the preparations and departure, but the navy could not conceal the visible aspects of the movement. Officers said no progress reports would be given out.

Without a single hitch the planes climbed from the glassy surface of Pearl Harbor at intervals of three or four minutes after beginning at 7:15 A. M. 12:48 P. M. eastern standard time. The last plane got away at 9:17 A. M. (2:47 P. M. EST).

Naval officials would not even admit a mass flight was being made. But it was learned the big air fleet was aiming for the tiny coral islet which soon is to become a way station for contemplated trans-Pacific commercial airplane service.

It also was learned the group expected to reach the little island, a mere speck on the map, in 10 or 11 hours; that the planes would remain away from Pearl Harbor for about a month to figure in other ambitious aerial operations far at sea, possibly including flights between this area and the Aleutian Islands of Alaska, 11,700 miles distant.

ALL ILLINOIS RELIEF WILL END SATURDAY

102 Counties Will Be Without Funds IERC Reports

Chicago, May 9.—(AP)—Illinois Emergency Relief Commission officials tonight forecast that by Saturday all but one of the 102 counties in the state would be without funds as reports continued to mount of suffering and privation.

Only Richland county, they said, would have funds to last longer than that date. Frank Downes, head of the Alexander county relief organization, first to shut down as a result of dwindling funds, late today telegraphed Robert J. Dunham, head of the IERC.

"Relief situation grave. Many suffering from hunger. Wiring Horner," Governor Henry Horner, here for conferences after the house again had suspended roll call without passing the three percent sales tax to raise $3,000,000 for poor relief, went into conferences with democratic leaders still hopeful that the bill would pass next week when it again will come up for consideration.

"The whole thing is so simple," he said. "If we can get a few more men to see the light. Of course, if any violence were to break out, I suppose these men would change their minds, but that would be a terrible price to pay for their votes."

In Chicago, where the county board had been able to meet relief needs through a special sale of bonds after state and federal funds gave out, there was only enough money left for a few more days activity. The board met today and adjourned without taking further action regarding possible sale of other bonds to finance needs of the 600,000 unemployed here.

MUST SURRENDER EAGLE
Chicago, May 9.—(AP)—The Stuber and Kuck company, Peoria, Ill., was ordered today by C. F. Rumely, NRA regional compliance director, to surrender the company's Blue Eagle for violation of the standard steel barrel and drum manufacturing code.

The company, the regional director charged, has failed to file certain reports of prices, terms, quantity differentials and basis of delivery with the agent of the supplementary code authority.

DEPRIVED OF BLUE EAGLE
Chicago, May 9.—(AP)—NRA headquarters announced today that the Eureka Steel Range company of O'Fallon, Ill., has been deprived of its Blue Eagle insignia for failure to pay the company's contribution to the costs of administering the cooking and heating appliance manufacturing industry code.

'HUNGER MARCH' ON SPRINGFIELD IS CALLED OFF

Unemployed Men, Women Ordered Home

By Milburn P. Akers
Associated Press Staff Writer
Springfield, Ill., May 9.—(AP)—With plans for a series of local relief demonstrations, the Illinois Workers Alliance' one-day "hunger march" on Springfield ended this evening with the evacuation of the temporary camp in an outlying park.

The unemployed men and women, numbering less than five hundred, were ordered by their leaders to return home and continue there the protests against the closing of relief stations.

Edward C. Morgan of Staunton, president of the Workers Alliance, said city officials had promised to give the demonstrators food and shelter.

It appears that no good purpose can come of remaining in the city while the legislature and Governor Horner aren't here. It seems they ran out on us," Morgan said.

Mostly from nearby mining communities, the "hunger marchers" gathered here this morning with the announced intention of camping in Springfield until state or federal funds are provided for relief in Illinois.

Following its custom, the legislature quit work on Thursday noon and Mr. Horner went to Chicago for conferences there about the deadlocked bills to finance relief by tax increases.

"They have been very crafty in handling the whole situation," Morgan said. "A few relief stations have been kept open and a few relief checks passed out, thus preventing a mass uprising of the workers. The time is not yet opportune for a mass demonstration at the State House."

The orders to disperse were given by Morgan and other leaders after conferring with the city officials. Plans were first made for the picketing of local relief stations.

Gerry Allard, local leader for the Workers Alliance, said state police turned back several truckloads of demonstrators who had started for Springfield.

Juvenile "Mob" Queen Arrested For Auto Theft

Police Claim 19 Year Old Girl Admitted Stealing Fourteen Cars

Chicago, May 9.—(AP)—Red-haired Helen Gilmore, 19, who battled a police sergeant with an Amazon's ferocity before she was subdued and captured, was booked today for a series of automobile larcenies which police said she committed as "queen" of a juvenile "mob."

Seven charges were lodged against Helen, clad in blue denim overalls, and John Kendzurski, 17, whom she described as her "boy friend." They were arrested when Sgt. Lawrence Smalley observed them driving two stolen automobiles into an alley, but only after the sergeant put up a vigorous rough and tumble fight during which his pistol was twice discharged.

Sgt. Gus Bartels said Helen admitted stealing 14 automobiles in six months. Police raided a squalid shack termed the "Doolittle Club" by the youths who frequented it, and seized Helen's brother, Walter, another youth and three girls. Their ages ranged from 14 to 19. All were held for further investigation.

COULDN'T GET IN
Chicago, May 9.—(AP)—Aaron Greenberg contended his wife, Florence, deserted him. But she had a different version when she appeared before Judge Rudolph Desort.

"He changed the locks on the doors of our house so I couldn't get in," she said.

"Then it was he who deserted you," said the judge after which he gave her a divorce and $5 a week alimony.

ENGINEER INJURED
St. Louis, May 9.—(AP)—M. A. Muir, Charleston, Ill., an engineer for the Nickel Plate railroad, suffered a fractured skull today when his head struck a bridge projection as his train approached St. Louis from Venice, Ill.

At a hospital here his condition was said to be serious.

Fight Opens to Impeach U. S. Judge

Impeachment action against Samuel Alschuler, left, nationally known federal circuit judge, has been taken in the House by Representative Everett Dirksen, right, Peoria, Ill. Republican, who charges the jurist with "favoritism and breach of duty" in a patent infringement case in Chicago. "Ridiculous," is the judge's answer. House Democrats, rising to Alschuler's defense, bitterly assailed Dirksen, alleging the move was made to boost his reported candidacy for governor of Illinois.

White House and Congress Prepare For Battle Over New Money Bonus Measure

HAMILTON AND PALMER DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Braggart Desperado Is Ashen White As He Enters Chamber

Associated Press Staff Writer
Washington, May 9.—(AP)—An apparently inevitable head on collision between congress and the White House over the $2,000,000,000 new money bonus bill tonight found both camps arming themselves to the teeth.

Calling in his financial advisors, President Roosevelt prepared to veto the inflationary Patman bill, even though he has not yet received it from congress.

Patman bill leaders on Capitol Hill frankly sparred for time. After private senate polls indicated that veto would be sustained, possibly by as many as five or six votes, they locked the measure up until next week. Hastily they sought, first, to rally votes directly to override a veto, and simultaneously, to call down a shower of telegrams on the Capitol in support of the measure.

An hour-long White House talk, attended by secretary Morgenthau, veterans administration Frank T. Hines and budget director Bell, brought only the comment that "we were discussing the proposed bonus legislation."

A direct question directed at Hines, as to whether any alternate program had been discussed for possible submission to congress along with the veto message, brought a negative answer. Administration supporters at the Capitol also said they doubted that any alternative would be put forward, but rumors to that effect, nevertheless were not entirely baseless.

Congressional supporters of the inflationary measure, meanwhile, flatly rejected non-presidential proposals for a compromise and decided to stand for or fall with the bill approved by the senate Tuesday. They announced, however, they would hold up action on it until next week.

BANKING BILL IS PASSED BY HOUSE 271-110

New Federal Powers Over Money, Credit Is Voted

By Clarence M. Wright
Washington, May 9.—(AP)—Extraordinary new federal powers over money and credit were voted today by the house in speeding the administration's omnibus banking bill to an uncertain senate reception.

The 271 to 110 vote on final passage wrote a half-congress approval on the 91-page bill endorsed by Governor Marriner S. E. Eccles of the federal reserve board, designed to extend vastly the board's powers.

But while strengthening centralized authority, the representatives impatient brushed aside two proposals to go further in the same direction—one for uniting the banking system; the other to make a government-owned and controlled central bank out of the 12 federal reserve banks.

Despite the overwhelming house vote and President Roosevelt's backing, a bitter battle over the bill—especially its federal reserve sections—was forecast in the senate. Senator Glass D. (Va.) has started banking subcommittee hearings on the measure and tomorrow Eccles will be heard. Senate leaders believe it will be several weeks before floor consideration begins.

Two days of heated debate over amendments preceded the final house ballot on the legislation which makes permanent the present temporary deposit insurance system, extends reserve board control over open market operations in government securities, and empowers the board to vary the reserves member banks must maintain against deposits to "prevent injurious credit expansion or contraction."

Existing reserve requires that all state banks must belong to the federal reserve system by July 1, 1937, in order to get federal deposit insurance. The banking committee in the bill presented to the house and passed today, decided to eliminate that requirement although it had the approval of Leo T. Rowley, chairman of the deposit insurance corporation, and other high officials.

Republicans, unsuccessful in getting the bill out of the committee, determined on the filibuster. Intending that no business other than that having to do with relief shall be transacted by the House until the bill is placed on the calendar.

Charming Prince Not Looking for A Wife He Says

Denies He Will Marry Young Lady Who Is Now Barbara Hutton-Mdivani

By Francis A. Jamieson
New York, May 9.—(AP)—A charming young man from Denmark—blase and poised—came to Manhattan today but not, he carefully assured you, to marry a charming young lady who is now Princess Barbara Hutton-Mdivani.

This young man, Count Court Hagwitz-Revenlow, is not going to marry the princess, American heiress whose divorce suit against her polo-playing prince may be heard in Reno Monday, or anybody "ever."

"There won't be any marriage for me," he said, a broad smile creasing his handsome face, as he emerged from the seclusion of his suite aboard the liner Bremen.

"I have never been married, and I have never been engaged, and I don't ever intend to be married," said the count, a study in blue from suit to shirt to tie. He backed up his assertion with a $25 bet, to last for a year, that he wouldn't marry Princess Mdivani or anybody else. And he carefully took down the name and address of the doubter.

Illinois House Plans to Take Fourth Vote on Three Percent Sales Tax Tuesday

BELEVILLE, ILL., MAYOR APPEALS TO GOV. HORNER

Asks Governor To Aid In Settlement Of Power Strike

Belleville, Ill., May 9.—(AP)—Mayor George Remmsnyder today appealed to Governor Horner in an effort to settle the troubled labor situation here that has grown out of a strike of union electrical workers of the Illinois Power and Light company.

The telegram climaxed a day of conferences which followed yesterday's labor "holiday" when union workers of several industries deserted their jobs to protest against the alleged hiring of "armed guards" by the Power company to protect its news employees, brought in when the strikers refused to return to work.

The Mayor asked Gov. Horner to "use all the power at your command to bring about a conference of all interested parties which will bring a peaceful, amicable settlement of this most serious situation." He asked the governor to seek an immediate settlement of the strike, called April 3, which has disrupted light and gas service in several southern Illinois communities.

If the governor fails to act, Mayor Remmsnyder said, he will call a conference of mayors of all the towns in the strike area and prepare a mass appeal to the chief executive. In addition he planned to meet with John H. Mitchell, manager of Illinois Power and Light's southern group, in an effort to get the strikers back to their jobs.

Remmsnyder today made public the order which he sent the Power company yesterday after unions had protested against the presence of the guards. In it he said, "In the interest of public safety and to avoid the danger of riot you are hereby ordered to withdraw the armed guards in your Belleville sub station." A short time after the order was issued several men left the plant and were escorted out of town by police and deputy sheriffs.

STORM SWEEPS TEN COUNTIES IN ILLINOIS

Heavy Damage Reported To Grain Fields, Homes

Springfield, Ill., May 9.—(AP)—Damage to rural fields and urban homes was revealed today after a checkup on the severe wind, rain and hail storms which swept ten Illinois counties last night.

Practically every house in the village of Ursa, where hail stones as large as golf balls fell for 45 minutes, had broken windows, riddled roofs or split weatherboards. Bear Creek was out of its banks and was flooding much bottom land today.

Hailstorms also were reported in the vicinities of Carthage, Mt. Sterling and Big Neck. Utilities service was interrupted in Beardstown, Virginia, Raccoon, Carlinville and Pana.

Many wheat, rye and oats fields, were completely ruined or badly damaged.

Farmers in the Bloomington area said that farming operations would be delayed 10 days as the result of flood waters and farmers expressed some worry over corn planting.

The ground already plowed will give weeds a head start and there is ground yet to be plowed. The Kickapoo and Sugar creek were out of their banks. Some livestock was lost in the heavy rains and an aerial reporter said he saw several pigs drowned and floating downstream in the swollen creeks.

Bridges on the Kickapoo were under water between Heyworth and Lawn-dale, roadways were washed out several places and many automobiles were stalled.

At Covell a tree crushed through the A. L. Nichol home and wreckage narrowly missed Miss Libbie Heifer, asleep there at the time. Damage to the house was estimated at $2,500. Bloomington basements and subways were flooded.

For Continued Peace
At Jubilee Service

Expresses Gratitude That Outposts Do Not Feel
Fear of Trouble

London—(AP)—King George told members of parliament today on his silver jubilee that he prayed his country could continue to pursue the cause of freedom and progress.

"In these days when fear and preparation for war are again astir in the world," the monarch said, "let us be thankful that quiet, government and peace prevail over so large a part of the earth's surface."

King George also expressed gratitude "that under our flag of freedom so many millions eat their daily bread in far distant lands and climes with none to make them afraid."

Referring to Westminster Hall where he received the lords and the members of the house of commons as "the very cradle of our envied parliamentary institutions," the king said:

"Here is an anvil on which our common law was forged to become the joint inheritance of the United States of America and of our own community of peoples."

The king, looking back over his 25 eventful years of reign, said the thankfulness he felt was "chiefly for escape from a danger greater than ever before threatened our land"—the World War—in which "strength upheld the free."

EXTRA $50,000 IS WITHIN REACH OF THE WOOL RAISERS

Urbana, Ill.—Prospects for wool prices are none too bright now that the shearing season is at hand, but an extra $50,000 for their crop is not out of the range of possibility for Illinois farmers, according to W. G. Kammlade, associate chief of the sheep husbandry division, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. All that sheep raisers of the state would have to do to add this amount to their gross return would be to grow, handle and market their average clip of five million pounds in such a way as to add a cent a pound to its value, he pointed out.

The average U. S. farm price of wool in March, the most recent period for which figures are available, was 17.4 cents a pound, whereas parity at that time was 22.5 cents.

The quality of wool depends, first of all, upon the breed of sheep from which it came and the care of those sheep. However, the best quality wool may bring a poor price because of improper care during and after shearing, says Kammlade.

Before being shorn, sheep should be kept as clean as possible. Shearing should never be done when the wool is wet. This may permanently injure the fleece. The use of sisal or jute twines for tying up the wool is discouraged by Kammlade. Fibers from these twines may remain in the wool to cause imperfections in the cloth made from the clip.

Wool should be prepared for market immediately after shearing. It is at its best then, and the full value can be determined on a basis fair both to the farmer and the buyer. Storage of the wool for a considerable time may result in a variety of damages to the clip, Kammlade points out.

It is not too early, even now, to plan for better wool returns in 1936, inasmuch as care of the flock between now and the time of the next clip will have much to do with the quality of the wool produced, Kammlade added. Sheep that are well fed, housed in clean, comfortable quarters and kept free from diseases and parasites will produce a much better clip than animals that are neglected and allowed to pasture in bur-infested fields.

After all, Kammlade concludes, the value of wool can be no greater than its usefulness to the consumer.

Who Died in South are Returned for Burial

Greenfield—Clyde, son of Clyde and Leora Pointer Richards, was born in Greenfield, Ill., and died quite suddenly at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Mary Kahn in Duck Hill, Mississippi on Tuesday, May 7th, at 12:45 a. m., aged 17 years. The young man had been in ill health the past few months due to a touch of malaria but was not considered serious. His mother died in 1923 and his father in 1926, and he and his brothers and sisters went to live with his aunt where they were raised. He is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Verna Lucas of Tutwiler, Miss. Mrs. Lucille Spencer of Batesville, Miss., and Bernice Chamberliss of Davenport, Iowa; two brothers, Gerald of Fort Bending Georgia and Leonard of Duck Hill, Mississippi.

His remains accompanied by his aunt and brother, Leonard, arrived here by rail Wednesday. Funeral services were conducted from the Presbyterian church at 2 o'clock Wednesday, in charge of Rev. W. W. Brown of the Baptist church. Interment was made in Rose Hill cemetery.

FARMERS WARNED TO TAKE CARE OF HORSES

Farmers throughout the state have been warned to take special care of their horses when the rush of spring work begins. Already in this county there has been some loss among horses which were not accustomed to the heavy work in the fields.

But the season is late and when farmers once get into the fields they will be in a hurry to get crops planted. The weather is likely to be hot, many horses are old and unused to hard work. It is therefore necessary that they receive special care and that farmers use caution in working them. Horses are more valuable now than at any time since the depression began, and the death of one means a real loss to the owner.

HAPPINESS
a Habit

Wouldn't you like to step up the amount of enjoyment you get from life? The knack of keeping fit is largely a matter of regular habits. Your happiness may be hampered by common constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in your meals.

Did you know that your grocer has a natural cereal food which corrects this condition? Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, eaten regularly, supplies generous "bulk." Also vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle—and safe for normal individuals. More effective than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables, as it does not break down within the body.

Two tablespoonsful daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with see your doctor.

Isn't this natural food much better than taking patent medicines? Serve it as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in cooking. Get Kellogg's ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. It contains much more "bulk" than part-bran products. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

My Cookery News Notes

By LUCILE HARRIS

Editor's Note: "Cookery News Notes" is a new feature of this newspaper, and will be followed with interest by our women readers. The writer is Lucile Harris, staff member of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, recognized authority on cookery of all kinds and especially meat cookery and the planning of meals around the meat course. Experimental cookery has developed a good deal of new information about cooking meat, which is contrary to old ideas. This series of articles will give our readers this new information in helpful form, and will also give a series of excellent recipes and suggestions for serving the meat course of the meal.

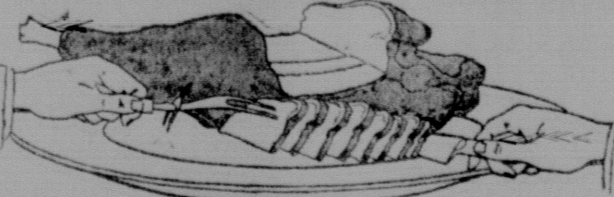

CARVING

MADE EASY

Whatever cut of meat you are carving, let neatness be your watchword. Take plenty of time. If the family really wish to be helped, they should engage in conversation and not watch the carving operation. Their patience will be rewarded when you serve them beautifully cut portions arranged so that everyone at the table has his share of the most desirable part.

As the slices are cut, they should be neatly placed upon the platter, with the browned or best side up. When pork has an odd shaped bone in which is difficult to carve around. A most attractive roast, and one which will be especially appreciated by the carver in your household, may be made from this cut. Ask the meat man to remove the bone from the square cut shoulder and sew up the sides, leaving one side open. Fill the cavity with some tasty dressing; sew or skewer the edges together and roast the meat as usual. The carving of this roast is simple—merely slice down through the meat, cutting across the grain of course, so that each por-there are enough slices for all, begin serving.

A carving board is a convenience—many meat platters are equipped with them now. The rougher surface of the board tends to keep the roast from slipping. The use of a board saves your best silver platter from being scratched while the softer surface of the wood is easier on the edge of the carving knife.

Carving Crown Roast
A crown roast of lamb or pork is a proud dish to eat before any carver. It looks very grand especially if the points of the "crown" are gaily frilled or beaded with fruit. For all its regal appearance it is one of the simplest dishes to carve since the divisions between the chops are clearly indicated. The cut is made between each of the ribs. A single chop with a portion of dressing and a spoonful of gravy is served to each person. The only care necessary is that the pieces be of equal thickness.

It is well to start your carving education by practicing on the meats which are easily carved. But if you wish to become really expert in this art, a knowledge of the anatomy of the various meat cuts is essential. You should know where bones and joints are found and in which direction the fibers of the meat run. It is a good idea to find out about these things in advance by visiting the kitchen to examine the meat before it is cooked.

Carving Leg of Lamb
In carving a leg of lamb, the roast should be placed before the carver with the small end to the left and the skin side down.

There are really two methods of carving the leg of lamb and you may want to try both of them to determine which is easier for you. According to one method, the slices are cut through the center, perpendicular to the long bone and parallel to the aitch bone. This last mentioned bone is the flat bone to the left of the hip bone when the roast is in the correct position, and which is easily found since it sticks up above the meat making a slight projection in the roast.

Begin at the large end and make the first incision with the knife just ahead of the aitch bone. Cut several slices through to the bone, then run the knife along the bone to release the half slices. For a second serving, turn the leg over and carve the other side in the same way.

This second method gives a larger number of slices of uniform size, all of them cut across the grain of the meat.

Always Carve Across Grain
In the second method the carver begins at the right end of the leg as before but instead of cutting straight down to the bone he makes a thin slice at an angle of about thirty degrees. The slices are a little larger but the meat fibers are longer, which is the reason the first method is usually preferred.

However, you carve it, never cut a leg of lamb in horizontal slices, that is, parallel to the top, for then you are cutting with the grain and the result will be a stringy piece of meat.

These are Easy!
Boned and rolled roasts are easily carved. It has been suggested that the rolled roast be arranged on the platter so it will stand on one end. There will be much less sliding around on the platter and the carving is done so much more easily.

The shoulder cut of either lamb or pork is easily carved.

WATCH KIDNEYS SAME AS BOWELS

Wash Out Your 79,200 Feet of Kidney Tubes

Your bowels contain only 27 feet of intestines, yet the kidneys contain nearly 10 million tiny tubes or filters which would measure 79,200 feet if laid end to end. Therefore, it is just as important to watch the kidneys as the bowels. Kidneys are working all the time and are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and poisonous waste out of the blood.

Healthy persons pass thru the bladder 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter. If you pass less than this, your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes may be clogged with poisonous waste. This is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Kidneys should be watched closely and need cleansing out the same as bowels. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to wash out your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Exhibit by Manual Training and Fine Arts Pupils Friday

Work of Several Classes Will Be Included in Display at J.H.S.

Principal J. C. Mutch of the Jacksonville High school announces that the manual art and fine art students of the Jacksonville Senior High school and the Junior High school are putting the finishing touches upon articles to be on display in the annual exhibit to be held at the high school on Friday evening.

These articles are made in the class periods and show remarkable talent and training. On display from the manual training department directed by Eibert Lahr, will be shown massive cedar chests, tables, in mosaic design, colonial tip top tables, tables with drop leaves, shelves, lamps, and latitudes. Sail boats in a variety of design, also large row boats. Breakfast set furniture in attractive colors is shown in many designs.

The Junior High school exhibit in this department will have on display lamps, magazine racks, foot-stools and sandwich trays, which show good workmanship.

In the mechanical drawing, printing department, with John S. May as the director, the architectural drawings are outstanding, showing fine work. Drawings of the exterior of homes and buildings, including garages, cottages and large homes as well as public buildings are shown with the yard plan worked out in a design, in a model of the completed plan. The colored perspective is shown and the isometric section a comparatively new feature, especially of interest to the layman.

One of the many interesting drawings and models is that of the home of Dr. R. O. Stoops in Pennsylvania. Others are the floor plan of a theater and of a large Lake Shore home drawn from a small photograph. Free hand drawings are also in the exhibit which are very well done.

Miss Esther Robinson, supervisor of art, will have a showing of the drawings, leather work, and artifacts by students in the Senior High school and the Junior High school.

During the hours of the exhibition the H. S. band directed by A. L. Freeman will give a concert in the auditorium.

SCHOOL FOR BLIND MUSICIANS FURNISH PROGRAM AT COLLEGE

During the regular assembly period on Thursday morning, the students and faculty of Illinois College had the privilege of listening to a program by the orchestra from the Illinois School for the Blind, conducted by Frederick Myers of the I. S. B. faculty. The first three selections were ballet numbers from Faust. There were followed by "Traumeri," which was played by a violin quartet, and the concluding number was "Mignonette," by Priml, played by the entire orchestra. In response to the continued applause, the musicians gave as an encore "Roundabout," by Westeraut.

The orchestra is composed entirely of students at the State School for the Blind, and the delightful program was greatly enjoyed by the audience.

Alexander business visitors here yesterday included S. B. Kumble.

Insanity Ignorance Poverty

This screwy idea was thought up in a state insanity and sent to you with the hope it might bring you hard luck within three days.

Make five copies of this letter and send me a dime wrapped in a ten dollar bill. Send the five copies to five friends or enemies who you know to be sort of dizzy.

Leave off the five top names and add your own making an application to the Insane Asylum for each of them.

In omitting the top name you write 16,625 letters and mail them out at the rate of 3c each and figuring your time, stationery, and wear and tear on brain at 15c you will only be out $1,662.50 and I guarantee you will qualify for this club.

Now, is this idea worth a plugged nickel? OF COURSE NOT!

Don't have faith in anyone, don't join any more clubs and don't send me any more chain letters, or we shall certainly go "NERTS" together.

WRITERS REST WHILE NAMES WORK TO TOP

Some Maintain Hope and Others Express Doubt

Displaying symptoms of writer's cramps, a host of Jacksonville chain letter authors relaxed Thursday while their names "worked to the top." "It will take a little time," some of them explained, while others began to recover from the hysteria that existed in many homes and business houses Wednesday.

Some sponsors of chain letters are confident they will reap handsome rewards. But an element of doubt has crept into the minds of many persons who were swayed by the fad. The nickels and dimes are not pouring in as they should "on paper."

The chain letter craze is believed to have reached its zenith here Wednesday. Everyone, it seemed, was starting chains. Old chains were regarded as new ones were forged. Such a condition no doubt spelled the beginning of the end in this community.

Numerous stories of "chiseling" were prevalent. A few writers were heard to charge that their names had been "dropped" and others substituted. One man who has never subscribed to a chain letter of any kind received a dollar bill in the mail. This was construed by some as an indication that someone had "two-timed" his brethren of the chain.

By sending a dollar to a person not in the ring, another name was substituted quickly. It was explained by veterans of the moon-by-mail game. This is not according to Hoyle, and when distrust enters the festivities interest begins to ebb.

Most chain letter writers agreed yesterday that those who "got in on the ground floor" a few days ago were the ones who stood a chance of profit. Easy money from now on will come harder.

RAINFALL HERE IS 1.08 INCHES

Total Precipitation for May in City Reaches 5.44 Inches

A rainfall of 1.08 inches was recorded in this city during Wednesday night. The storm which started about 9 p. m. and continued until after daylight, was accompanied by considerable electrical disturbance which interfered somewhat with power and telephone service.

The heavy rain sent the city lakes far over the spillways and flooded the bottoms beyond Mauvasterre dam. The water reached within less than a hundred feet of the city pumping plant and flooded the hard road near Oaklawn sanitarium.

However, the water soon subsided, doing little damage. Many basements were again flooded in the lower sections of the city. The town brook ran almost bankfull. The rainfall Wednesday night brought the total for May thus far up to 5.44 inches.

The storm was worse to the north and northwest than it was here. Telephone communications with Beardstown and Arenaville were disrupted, and it was reported that a "twister" had visited that portion of Cass county. Extra linemen were put on the job to repair the damage. The toll lines to Quincy were also down, and gangs were sent out by the Bell system to put them in order.

From Winchester and Bluffs came reports of heavy wind and hail accompanying the downpour of rain and electric storm. Many limbs were blown from trees in both communities. Winchester reported several rural telephone lines down, with about fifty phones out of service.

Damage at Beardstown
Beardstown.—(Special to Journal)—The storm which visited this city Wednesday night interfered somewhat with telephone and electric power service, but its principal damage was done at the pumping plant of the Cole Creek Drainage and Levee district across the river. Lightning struck the transformer which feeds power to the automatic pumps, and thus put them out of commission.

With the pumps not working, the heavy rainfall was able to flood the plant, which is at the lowest point in the district of 7,000 acres. Thus it has been impossible to get the pumps back into operation, and there is fear that surface water collecting in the basin may flood the two hard road routes which connect Beardstown with Rushville and Quincy.

About two years ago the district abandoned the pumping plant, and it has since been operated by the city of Beardstown and the State of Illinois in order to keep the roads clear. Thursday authorities were considering whether it would be necessary to restore the plant by building a coffer dam and pumping the water out of it. An emergency pump would also have to be put in operation to pump the water out of the plant, after which the regular machinery could be used to pump it out of the district.

The storm was accompanied by violent wind which uprooted about 25 trees within the city. Wires were blown down in some sections, but quick repairs were made, and yesterday morning all telephones in Beardstown were re-established with Jacksonville during the morning.

The rain brought a rise of 9 inches in the Illinois river. The stage yesterday was 12.4 feet. The river has been rising since early in March, and has added about seven feet to its level from the low stage it had during the drought.

Miss Effie Claridy of Murrayville was shopping here yesterday.

There are between 4,000 and 5,000 pairs of bargains still left in the EXECUTOR'S closing out sale of James McGinnis shoe stock.

CHAPTER I

It was July, the hour 8 o'clock in the morning. Locusts sang in the high elms bordering the winding road which capped the ridge of hills. The deep blue sky was brushed over with wisps of clouds, and there was in the air a threat of the intense heat which would presently brood over the whole countryside in the quiet of mid-day. A bridge path wandered through the stillness, and there was a church-like hush in the deep places, where brooks ran over copper-colored stones and toads hopped in the long grass.

Katharine Strykhurst walked her mare through the woods, slowly at first, later spurring her to a more daring gait. The beautiful Katharine was wearing this fine morning dress. Her dark, exquisitely arched brows almost met over fine eyes of an intense dark blue. Her fair hair, fine and silky, with a sheen of authentic gold in its deep waves, was brushed straight back from her brow and gathered into a knot at the nape of her neck. Her white linen jodhpurs, her casually open white shirt, set off her looks to perfection. Yet there was something almost startling in the contrast between the darkness of those eyes and the fairness of her skin and hair. Katharine, in fact, was a mass of contradictions, and was occasionally proud of it. She was at once proud and humble, arrogant and gentle; her spirit suffraged keenly because of the contrariness of her warring emotions.

This morning was a fair example. She had come to the riding club—Michael Heather's club—fully expecting Katharine to accompany her on her morning canter. For weeks now—ever since the early part of April, actually—that had been the accepted order of things. Katharine no longer needed the service of a groom. She handled the little mare now with spirit and authority, but it had been Michael's habit to mount his roan and lead her along the paths. This particular morning another pupil had been at the stable before her—a plump, dark, lusciously pretty girl whom Katharine recognized as Sally Moon, one of the girls who had come to the same school Katharine had attended in the village of Inglewood, which lay below her now in the shimmering haze of morning. Sally's people owned a big, rambling white house on one of Inglewood's most fashionable streets. Like everything belonging to the Moons (Katharine said to herself) it was ugly, tasteless.

KATHARINE had nodded coldly to Sally who was replete with breeches and brightly polished boots and who wore the most absurd of crocheted yellow sports berets on her dark mass of curls, at an absurd angle.

The colored boy had come out, grinning at Katharine, leading the little mare known as Fury. Katharine had shut off the ignition, had leaped out of her car, and (not without a flourish) had mounted Fury's back with ease and elegance. She had heard Sally say languidly, to Tips: "Is Michael coming?"

Out of the corner of her eye, Katharine had been aware that Tips had nodded in the direction of the stable, whence Michael Heather was at that moment emerging. The sun caught the crest of his red hair and made it gleam. Katharine felt her heart plunge, right itself. It was insane—this is the way her traitorous nerves always behaved when Michael first appeared on the scene. A perfectly ordinary young man in riding clothes, she told herself, proudly and scornfully; that was all he was.

Michael had greeted her with an unself-conscious smile. "Sorry I can't ride with you. I've a lesson." He had thrown a glance in Sally's direction, and Katharine had forced her stiff lips into the semblance of a smile. Naturally he would ride with Sally Moon, if she were a beginner. It was Michael (whose riding school it was) who was gentle and most patient with the beginners. His assistants, Roddy and young Jim, were neither such expert horsemen as he, nor so adept with the nervous amateurs. Only—only—why had Sally chosen Katharine's special hour? It was maddening.

Katharine threw up her hand, some head with an impatient gesture, going over the brief scene again. All its images were silhouetted against a slide in her brain. Sally, with her overripe lips, her insistently feminine curves forced into the restrictions of breeches and tailored coat, her dark curls coquettishly foaming beneath her hat. Katharine herself, fair and tanned, in white linen, frowning a little in spite of herself. And Michael, casual as he always was, in old whipcords with an olive green sweater. Michael, who had lost all he owned out in Montana and who had come east to start over again.

"I'm quite, quite mad," she confided to the silent aisles, riding by. Certainly it was none of her business if Michael had a new pupil. He needed all he could get during the spring and summer seasons. All the summer people went back to the city the first of September, leaving Inglewood shuttered and silent. No, Michael had to look to his own affairs while summer people rented big houses on the bay and along the lanes. If Sally Moon learned to ride at the Shady Ridge, largest of the stone houses down on the point. It was set in the midst of park-like acres. Its Norman turret was tinged with ivy, and in summer elephas drooped mournfully from its portico. Within it was dark with seasoned oak, eastern rugs, bronze lamps and red velvet hangings. Twenty-five years ago it had been a "show-place," and in the eyes of Katharine's trim, modern stepmother it was that still. Her father, white-haired, portly, a lawyer down in the city, never thought of changing anything about it. True, an oil burner had replaced the coal furnace several years ago, and two or three of the bathrooms had suffered innovations in the way of colored tiling and set tubs. Otherwise it was unchanged.

Katharine said to herself that she hated it. When she came into her mother's money—that would be next March, and she was looking forward to it—she would find herself a gay, modern apartment down in the city and would furnish it in the modern manner—tweedy fabrics, chairs fashioned of chromium tubing, angled tables with glittering mirrored surfaces. Meantime she merely existed among the furnishings which had seemed so grand to her mother as a bride a quarter of a century past.

Her father and her stepmother had no idea what went on under those smooth fair brows. Inwardly Katharine seethed, outwardly, at least, she was calm. This riding club of Michael Heather's had given her a much-needed outlet lately. When things pulled on her, when life seemed "too utterly poisonous" to bear another minute, she would slip into her riding things and drive over to Shady Ridge where the good smell of trampled earth, the stamping of horses in their stalls satisfied something in herself. Not that she would acknowledge, even for a minute, that she was interested in Michael.

SOME men liked Sally Moon's type; there was no doubt about that. Sally was luscious, sun-kissed, like a peach that has ripened over-long. Her chocolate-colored eyes slid in all directions, especially in the direction of whatever man happened to be about. She had a way of sidling up to men, half bold, half coy.

"I can't—I won't compete with that sort of thing," Katharine Strykhurst confided aloud to the world and was startled at herself. Who was asking her to compete with Sally? What on earth was she raving about?

She began to laugh, and with the first rippling sound her black mood slid from her shoulders. What a fool she was, making a mountain out of a molehill! Michael was her friend, a tall, rangy young man with a slow smile and a caressing note in his voice for everyone. Sally was only a small-town coquette with too much makeup on and a trick of making every triangular conversation seem a competition in sex.

In a good humor now, Katharine galloped the mare the last few paces of that stretch of lane which would presently cross the Shore Road which was Inglewood's main artery. This far out, it was a broad ribboned highway, flanked by red and white gas stations and an occasional mammoth sign. A mile or two back from the Sound, it became Inglewood's Main Street, with tall maples shading old white houses with green shutters. Farther down still was the bank, the white-painted church, the library, Miss Matilda's nursery school, and a grocery store. Inglewood was an old village, sleepy, comfortable, leisurely. Katharine often said, with passion, that she hated it. She lived in one of the oldest and

CHAPTER I-A

The car door slammed and Zoe ran forward, uttering shrill cries of greeting. Zoe, Katharine told herself critically, was really lovely. Those glittering white teeth, that charming warm blush of sunburn, those bright blue dancing eyes! Pity Zoe was such a crashing fool!

"Hello, darling!" Zoe was in white linen with a vest of dark blue linen, dotted in white. Her shoes, her hat, her gloves were all unbelievably crisp.

"You look smart!" "Thanks. You do, too, darling!" Zoe cried. "We just got in last night. I was going to call you. How are you and what've you been doing?"

"Oh, the usual," Katharine drawled.

"I'm crazy to see everybody," Zoe declared. Everybody knew that Zoe's ambitious mother had whisked her to Europe in May in order to avoid a scandal about Gibbs Larkin. Gibbs was 35, handsome in a thoroughly dissolute way, conscienceless. Zoe had fallen headlong in love with him, with all her lightning impetuosity. Gibbs, people said, would never marry. He was one of those eternal bachelors who slip sweets where they will. Zoe had recklessly and defiantly been seen with him every place.

They chatted for a few moments longer, making an engagement to meet that afternoon.

"Has he got over Gibbs?" Katharine wondered. She did hope Zoe would spare her the confidences. These love recitals were bound to be boring. Katharine prided herself on her imperviousness to the grand passion. Love was stupid, it tied you all up, got your feelings confused. There was no sense to it.

All of which, of course, had nothing whatever to do with her feelings about Michael. She and Michael had simply been friends, good comrades, and it was perfectly natural she should be slightly miffed when he so casually gave away the hour which had been sacred to her for months.

THAT was Thursday morning. On Friday she went for her ride as usual, and Michael was there, tall, lean and casual.

"Mawwlin!" She smiled at him with just the right degree of casualness. "Good morning."

He tightened a strap, patted Prince Charlie's gleaming flank. "Storm comin' up!" he announced. "Oh, do you think so?" But Katharine's query was not the usual feminine flutter. She adored storms.

"Maybe I'd better take this," Michael flung an oilskin slicker across Prince Charlie's back.

"Not for me," Katharine said coolly.

The red-haired young man glanced at her quizzically a moment, then called to Tips: "Here, catch this!"

The slicker sailed through the air, landing in a pile of hay. The colored boy ran to retrieve it, with a flash of white teeth in an ebony face.

Presently Michael had a blaze going. Katharine, looking down at him, said, "Well, go on—lecture me—"

"Just as you say," Michael announced. He swung a long leg over his western saddle, leading the way.

The trees arched overhead in a conspiracy of silence. In the dim interstices where the sky could be seen there were patches of angry clouds. From the west rose a rumble of deep thunder.

"You won't mind gettin' wet?" He looked back at her over his shoulder, his gentle voice courteous as usual.

Katharine laughed. "No, why should I?"

The deep roll of distant thunder increased. They crossed an open meadow with a river meandering alongside and an orange flash of lightning flicked across the sky. Suddenly they were again in the woods, the horses wading carefully through the shallow stream and plunging up the muddy banks.

NOW the rain came down, suddenly, in torrents, in violent sheets. For the main part, the trees protected them, but soon the path again crossed a civilized road, a main highway. Great angry peals of thunder sounded, and the sky was made livid by the almost continual flashes of lightning. The horses were nervous. Fury danced and whinnied, refusing to proceed.

At the side of the road was a small blue-roofed cottage which had once housed a district school, and later an amateur radio station. It was unoccupied now. At the rear was a rude shelter for horses. Michael, without consulting Katharine, cantered back to her and seizing Fury's bridle, led the nervous little animal under cover.

"We'd better stop here a minute," he said quietly. "It's foolhardy to go on just now."

Michael helped her to dismount. Then he tied both Fury and Prince a little and shiver and be wistful, and there would be a good deal of argument about accepting the man's coat. Michael didn't have a coat, but that didn't matter. He ought at least to show some human concern about her. Why, she might have pneumonia.

KATHARINE, struck suddenly by the utter nonsense of her reasoning (she almost never had a cold), laughed aloud.

"What's the joke?" She glanced, sideways, at Michael Heather. "Nothing you'd understand!"

He dashed, the brick tint showing about the deep dark stain of his sunburn.

"I'm not so slow," he drawled in that easy western voice of his. "I didn't mean that," Katharine hastened to say.

Outside the thunder rolled and pealed, the sky steadily darkened, and occasional angry flashes of lightning illumined the room. The rain, obedient to a derisive wind, tore in at the door, and Michael closed it. Now they were shut in together.

"This may go on all morning," she said, at random, wishing only to break the silence.

"Oh, I don't think it will. It's lifting now."

But she had the feeling that he, too, wasn't thinking of what he was saying.

"Fury doesn't like it," he said, of the lightning. "She's nervous." "Just like a woman," Katharine said scornfully.

Her tone roused him. "I've known plenty of men who didn't like storms, either."

"Oh, but have you?" Katharine mocked him. Some devil of perverseness seemed to possess her. She wanted to startle, shock, annoy him—stir him out of his usual calm acceptance of her.

"Sure enough!" SHE stared at him, drinking in every line of his face, the quick gray eyes with the little laughter wrinkles etched around them. Michael was—how old? Twenty-eight? His shoulders were broad, his waist slim, like a true horseman's. She knew, she told herself, dozens of men better looking, smarter, better educated in every way. Why on earth did she bother with him?

"You don't think much of me around here, do you?" she pursued, scarcely knowing what she said.

"You all—people in Inglewood?" "Yes. You think we're all spoiled children—or something." Her tone was hateful and she knew it, but for the life of her she couldn't change it.

Michael stared at her thoughtfully. She had an impulse, almost irresistible, to reach up and rumple that dark red crest of hair, from which the stubborn curl had carefully been ironed only that morning.

"Folks around here have been mighty nice to me."

"Mighty nice!" She mocked his soft, easy drawl.

Suddenly she felt both her hands imprisoned, in a grip of steel. Gray eyes darkening like the stormy skies without looked into hers.

"You don't—you mustn't..." "Mustn't what?"

The treacherous tide within her warmed her heart. Was this surrender, of which she had heard so much?

But Michael Heather dropped her hands, released her as suddenly as he had seized her. "I beg your pardon," he muttered. "You sure made me mad, Miss Strykhurst. I guess I forgot myself..."

World Traveler Gives Good Advice TO FAT FOLKS

John Lethaby, of Portland, Ore., writes: "Have known Kruschen Salts for years in England, Africa, Brazil. I weighed 190, chest 40, waist 42. After 6 weeks with Kruschen am 165, chest 42, waist 36. It gives me pep and vigor and has kept me young."

Mr. Lethaby got rid of ugly fat safely with Kruschen so have thousands of others. YOU can, too, if you'll only have a will of your own and not listen to gossipers who tell you silly untruths because they don't want you to become youthfully slender.

Kruschen can't harm you — It's a health treatment—let one jar (lasts 4 weeks and costs but a trifle) take 12 lbs. off you or money back. Just take a half teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning (tastes fine with juice of half lemon added).

CRACK TWA AIRLINER, THE "SKY CHIEF", IN RUINS

The remains of the "Sky Chief," crack TWA passenger liner, that crashed Monday morning on a farm near Macon, Mo., resulting in death to the pilot and the co-pilot, Sen. Bronson Cutting of New Mexico and Miss Jeanne Anne Millas of Kansas City and injuries to nine other passengers. The photograph shows the smashed plane and part of a crowd that assembled to view the wreckage. The plane, east bound from Los Angeles, missed the Kansas City airport because of fog and finally ran out of fuel.

Four persons were killed and one person was fatally injured in this airplane tragedy near Macon, Mo., when the Sky Chief, crack TWA airliner, crashed. The plane, east bound from the west coast, missed Kansas City, and crashed when its fuel supply became low.

Formal Application Blanks for Projects Are Expected Today

Expect 40 Billion Stream of Requests for Public Work-Relief Funds

Washington—(P)—State and municipal officials who have been trying for several weeks to start proposed projects through the government's work relief bill were promised an opportunity to do so today.

Officials predicted that formal application blanks would be available before tonight at the offices of the National Emergency Council. Later, they said, they will be obtainable from members of congress and state directors of the emergency council.

It was predicted in official circles that issuance of these forms will touch off a $400,000,000 stream of applications. That would be ten times the amount appropriated for work relief.

Frank C. Walker, head of the emergency council and one of the "big three" of the work relief spending machine, ruled that all proposed projects—even $100,000 or more—must be submitted to him on the official application blanks.

Assistants to Walker asserted, however, that PWA and relief administration projects on which engineering and estimates have been completed probably will be passed on to the powerful allotment committee and the president ahead of other proposals.

Belief was expressed by one high official that fundamental decisions on administration of the work program still must be reached.

Chicago to Springfield Record Aim

Chicago—(P)—An attempt to cut the present fastest scheduled time on the Alton railroad between Chicago and Springfield, Ill., in half will be made Wednesday, May 15, with the Baltimore and Ohio's new streamlined steam locomotive.

The goal for the train will be two hours for the 166-mile run, now covered in four hours.

A group of guests of H. B. Voorhees, vice-president of both the Alton and the B. & O., will go to Springfield, where the dash to Chicago will start.

There are between 4,000 and 5,000 pairs of bargains still left in the EXECUTOR'S closing out sale of James McGinnis shoe stock.

Miss Bernadine Welsh of Winchester was a caller in the city Thursday.

Notes on White Sox Sensational Rise

Jimmy Dykes Has Been Putting His Hopes in Youngsters; Bonura Errorless

Chicago—(P)—Notes on the White Sox while they last (and some say they will):

Manager Jimmy Dykes has leaned on his rookie pitchers so heavily that they have pitched a combined total of 66 2-3 innings as against 54 1-3 by the veterans. Until the last two games, the rookies had pitched one-third of an inning more than the vets.

Five regulars are batting over .300—Hayes, .372; Jones, .333; Simmons, .320; Washington, .311; and Dykes, .310.

Zuke Bonura, criticized by some experts as a poor fielder at first base, hasn't made an error.

Hayes has started seven double plays.

Ripper Radcliff, who has been belting the ball all over the premises, uses the lightest bat in the majors. It weighs only 32 ounces.

Johnny Whitehead, the Texas rookie pitcher, who has won four straight, is the silent man of the team. His mates have to ask questions to get him to talk.

George Washington learned to play baseball in his own back yard when the local nine at Linden, Tex., laid out their ball grounds back of his house.

Join in Honoring King George

The world-wide observance of the Silver Jubilee of King George V's accession to the throne of England was typified in the memorial thanksgiving service conducted in the Washington (D. C.) AutoWorkersReject Company Proposals

Toledo, O.—(P)—Federal mediators renewed their efforts to settle the strike at the Chevrolet Motor company plant here today following rejection of a company peace proposal by the workers yesterday.

The auto workers voted 1,331 to 806 to refuse the company's offer and continue the strike. The company employed about 2,300 workers when the strike was called.

Edward F. McGrady, assistant to Secretary of Labor Perkins, said he intended to confer with General Motors officials in a new attempt to smooth out differences which have made 33,000 auto workers idle.

The strike here was called a little more than two weeks ago. The company immediately shut down its plant, cutting off the supply of Chevrolet transmissions to General Motors assembly plants. Since then nearly a score of auto plants in different cities have been shut down by the management or closed by strikes.
